A gateway to Judaism

We are Jews who study Torah and present it creatively and vibrantly in ways that speak across generations. Some of our members are Jewish educators and scholars; some do not yet know the alef-bet. We are a place where many people come to learn and some stay to teach.

Our members include students and faculty, staff and community, newborns and elders. Together we make a beautiful noise: singing, praying, discussing. Special events — bar/bat mitzvahs, ufrufs before weddings, baby-namings, daylong study-retreats, etc. — enhance our sense of community.

We are participatory, egalitarian, intergenerational, self-governing, and rabbi-guided. Our services are led by congregation members and are basically Conservative, but abridged to make room for a half-hour of lively discussion in English of each week's Torah portion. Discussion often continues after services over a delicious kiddush to which all are invited.
